Findings:

Early Life and Education:

Savitribai Phule was born into a lower-caste family in Naigaon village near Pune, Maharashtra. Her early education was limited, as girls from her social background were rarely allowed to learn. However, her thirst for knowledge was unquenchable. This thirst led her to be self-taught and to attend a local school run by her husband, Jyotirao Phule. She received an education in Marathi, Hindi, and English, laying the foundation for her later activism (Alok, 2022).

Marriage to Jyotirao Phule:

In 1850, at 19, Savitribai Phule married Jyotirao Phule, a social reformer who advocated for the rights of marginalized communities. Jyotirao, a staunch supporter of women's education, recognized Savitribai's intelligence and shared her passion for social justice. Their marriage was a partnership built on shared values and a common goal to create a more equitable society. This union would prove to be a powerful force in the fight for women's empowerment (Alok, 2022).

Establishment of the First School for Girls in India:

In 1848, Jyotirao Phule founded India's initial school for girls in Pune. Savitribai Phule played a pivotal role in this initiative by supporting her husband's vision and becoming a dedicated teacher herself. She faced immense opposition and social ostracism, as educating girls was considered a radical act at the time. Despite the challenges, she remained resolute in her commitment to empowering girls through education, paving the way for future generations of women to access knowledge and opportunities (indcnetwork& INDC Network, 2024).

Recognizing the immense inequality and lack of opportunities for women in education, Savitribai and Jyotirao Phule embarked on their mission to empower girls through education. They established the first girls' school in Pune, India, breaking traditional barriers and setting a precedent for women's education in the country (indcnetwork& INDC Network, 2024). The school faced significant resistance from the conservative society, but Savitribai's unwavering determination and Jyotirao's support kept the school running. She bravely faced prejudice and ridicule, becoming a symbol of hope and inspiration for aspiring girls (Alok, 2022).

Challenges and Obstacles Faced:

The path to establishing and sustaining the school was paved with numerous challenges. Societal norms and beliefs were deeply entrenched, making it difficult to convince parents to send their daughters to school. Many families feared the consequences of defying tradition and ostracization from the community. The Phules faced threats, boycotts, and public humiliation. They were often subjected to verbal abuse and physical attacks, but their commitment to educating girls remained steadfast. Savitribai's courage and resilience in the face of adversity are motivational illustrations of how one person can impact the world around him/her of overwhelming odds (Online, 2023).

Advocacy for Women's Rights and Education:

Savitribai Phule's advocacy for women's rights and education extended beyond the classroom.
